Thursday, February 27. 1707.

Hague, March 1.

A Memorial lately presented to the States General by M. Stepney, Her Majesty of Great Britain's Envoy extraordinary.

High and Mighty Lords,

HER Majesty being desirous to encourage her Subjects to trade with Spain, conformably to an Act of Parliament; which Liberty your High Mightinesses have given likewise to your Subjects; the underwritten Envoy, Extraordinary had the Honour to inform your High Mightinesses by his Memorial of the 17th of November past, that without Regard to her Majesty's and your High Mightinesses Passports, some Privateers of Zealand had seiz'd 4 Spanish Ships bound from Bilbao to Amsterdam, and would have carried them to Zealand, had they not been forc'd by contrary Wind to put into the Port of Falmouth, where the said Spanish Ships were stop'd, and afterwards set at Liberty by Order of the Admiralty of England.

The said Envoy did on that Occasion desire your High Mightinesses, on the Part of her Majesty, to hinder for the future the said Privateers of Zealand from troubling in that Manner the Commerce with Spain, which is of no less Concern to your High Mightinesses Subjects than to her Majesty's.

And whereas the Knowledge they have since had in Spain of the seizing of those 4 Ships, has produc'd this Effect, that no Ship would venture out of the Ports of that Kingdom upon the said Commerce, to the great Prejudice of her Majesty's Subjects; and that besides the Zealanders threaten to interrupt that Commerce; the said Envoy has receiv'd new Orders to desire your High Mightinesses to dispel those Fears and Apprehensions, by commanding effectually the Privateers and other Ships of Zealand to let the Commerce with Spain be at full Liberty, and not to molest directly or indirectly the Ships going or coming to traffick from the Ports of that Kingdom to those of England and Holland, when they are furnish'd with her Majesty's and your High Mightinesses Passports. Her Majesty expects this from your Justice, and for the common Benefit of the Subjects of both Nations. Done at the Hague the 16th of January 1707.

Sign'd,

G. de Stepney.
